THREE CHEERS TO 30 YEARS!

Thirty years ago, the site of present-day Silver Creek was 35 acres of undulating swampland covered with bullrushes.

There was no 540 North Street anywhere near Dixie Drive. In the words of Hans Kuhni, "The place was a mess."

But the world was discovering St. George's possibilities in 1994 and Hans had a vision of what the site could be.

By that Fall, he and his associates had filed Articles of Incorporation for the Silver Creek Townhomes Association. They broke ground for a clubhouse and a pool and two model homes—all with uniform architecture.

The first sale came early in 1995—and the new development quickly began selling itself.

"We never used a broker," Hans says. "We just showed prospective buyers four basic plans and then we built homes to suit as they were purchased, one at a time."

The first phase of eight acres quickly sold out and construction continued through the project's completion in 2005.

Sonny and Balinda Earl are among Silver Creek's earliest residents, having moved in in 1998.

They say they were originally attracted to Silver Creek because of the colorful terrain on the quieter side of St. George, the walking and biking paths, the proximity to Snow Canyon and golf courses, plus the look and feel of the community. Now, they add "good neighbors" to their reasons for living here.

The Earls admit that moving into a planned community at first required some changes in thinking.

For example, "Where we lived before, in Sandy," Sonny said, "You could do anything you wanted to do with your yard."

But, on the flip side, Balinda said "And some of the neighbors in Sandy didn't take care of their yards very well."

The Earls say they made the adjustment to planned community living and now "We love it."

Back in the day, Silver Creek's nearby amenities consisted of little more than Lin's Grocery. Cars on two-lane Dixie Drive were few.

Amid all the changes, as St. George has grown up around Silver Creek for three decades, our community has retained its original appeal.

This anniversary presents an opportunity to reflect on the decisions and the efforts that have contributed to the success of Silver Creek over the past 30 years.

It also presents an occasion to think about what we would hope Silver Creek to be like even 30 years from now, and to consider how, together, we can preserve the distinctive appeal and value of our homes, our investment, and our unique community.

What a great place to live!
Cheers to us all!

SECURITY TIPS

"See something? Say something!"

It's more than just a slogan.

If you ever have a security concern or feel uneasy about something you see, please report it to the HOA Security Committee. (Contact information on first page.)

Better to err on the side of caution and let someone know if a situation looks suspicious or unusual.

Suspicious activity might include someone hopping a fence to enter a yard or the pool, someone lingering in an area for an extended time, or someone visiting doors possibly to find an unlocked home or an unlocked car.

Prevention is key. If it doesn't look right, trust your intuition. Your action may prevent a bigger problem.

Thank you for looking out for your neighbors.
